

Fumi Tosu, Class of 2001

After working in the economic consulting field for 6+ years, I decided to switch paths and pursue a career in international development. I now work for the UN World Food Programme (WFP). After spending the past two years in Tanzania, my family and I are now off to Myanmar for our next assignment. My Economics studies at Williams gave me a solid foundation in analytical thinking that has helped me throughout my meandering career path.
