

The Visible Hand is Cornell's premier, student-run undergraduate economics journal. We aim to cover a wide range of economic issues and try to keep the focus of each journal relevant to the contemporary issues that occur in economics throughout the semester of publication. We are distributed in print across the Cornell Campus and are available online as a pdf through the Cornell Economics Society website (<http://www.rso.cornell.edu/ces/publications.html>).

We have reached out to other universities in the past and are trying to extend our reach by inviting students from Williams College to submit articles. We accept past papers, original pieces, and have no specific topic or length (we accept both longer and shorter pieces). Any assistance in distributing this information to your Economics students would be greatly appreciated.

Our submission deadline is October 10th and all submissions can be emailed to cornellvisiblehand@gmail.com. If you would like more information we are always available to answer any questions.