

Christopher Miller, Class of 1990

I am working as a software tester for Epic, a healthcare software company. In an odd way, the Econ major proved very useful as I initially applied for an accounting position and they instead hired me as a software tester. I don't directly use the major in my day to day work life, but my Williams education continues to pay dividends in terms of being able to work at a company staffed by very smart people and allowing me to be a successful contributor.
