Spring semester classes for economics students

1. Openings for undergraduates in Center for Development Economics tutorials, Spring 2013

---

Looking for a tutorial for the spring? A few spaces in tutorials on developing country issues – designed for Center for Development Economics students – have become available for the spring semester. Undergraduates uniformly report that they greatly enjoy taking classes at the CDE. These courses count towards the 300-level requirement for Economics majors. The two tutorials with openings are Econ 532T: Inclusive Growth: The Role of Social Safety Nets, and Econ 534T: Long-Term Fiscal Challenges. For further information on these tutorials, and instructions on how to apply for admission to them, please go to:
